Many people think that we can learn a lot about the culture of a foreign country simply by living in that country. However, this is not necessarily true. Often, the longer we stay in a foreign country, the more we realized how little we actually know about the culture of that country.

Books and talks about other people's culture can even be dangerous because they concentrate on cultural differences and exaggerate national character, and sometimes a lot of information they contain is untrue.

In a study recently carried out in Britain, people were asked to make a list of anything that they thought was typical of Britain and would interest a foreign visitor there. Most mentioned Shakespeare, the Queen, village inns, English folk dancing, English castles, and fish chips wrapped in newspaper. Although all of these characters can be found in British culture, they do not show the real interest of ordinary British people: (they are, in fact, simply stereotype-that is, general character which people wrongly think are typical.) What is surprising is that they were suggested by British people themselves as representing their culture. If people have such a wrong impression of their own culture, how much false would their impression of other culture be!

Question 19: Which of the following is true?

- A. It's easy to assimilate the culture of a foreign country.
- B. Visitors to a country are soon assimilated into its culture.
- C. British people understand their own culture more than other culture.
- D. The culture of a foreign country cannot be learned by reading books.

Question 20: It can be inferred from the last paragraph that it's easy to _____

- A. describe stereotypes of your country
- B. give exact information about your own country
- C. know a lot about your own country's culture
- D. know the culture of other countries

Question 21: If we stay a long time in a foreign country, _____

- A. we can seldom find out anything at all about its culture
- B. we will usually realize our own ignorance about its culture
- C. we will sometimes forget about culture of our own country
- D. we can often learn a lot about the culture of the foreign country

Question 22: When asked about their own culture, many British people _____

- A. were surprised by the question asked.
- B. said they themselves were not typical of British people
- C. gave incorrect answers
- D. argued they knew little about British culture

- Question 23: It is hard to learn about a country's culture from books because such books _____
- A. take no notice of culture difference
